PETER BENVENUTI
Benvenuti accepted by Harvard U.

Sixteen-year-old Peter Benvenuti, Bay High School senior, was notified Tuesday he had qualified for a full academic scholarship at Harvard University.

He is the son of Master Sgt. and Mrs. P.J. Benvenuti and grandson of Mrs. Mico Boyer and the late Mr. Benvenuti. In a letter dated April 13, L. Fred Jowers, director of freshman scholarships at Harvard College, wrote "Roughly four thousand of our candidates applied for financial aid this year; altogether, more than seven thousand candidates applied for admission to an entering class of twelve hundred. Your success in winning one of about 475 scholarships for the Class of 1971 indicates your conviction that you are exceptionally well qualified for Harvard University academically and personally and that you would do well here."

Some of the honors bestowed on Benvenuti at Bay High are: member of the student activity committee, regarded as one of the highest honors in the school; president of the junior class (senior class president has not yet been named); editor-in-chief.

6 entered to vie for sheriff

Two more candidates formally announced this week for sheriff and tax collector, bringing to six the field to date for this race in the Aug. 8 Democratic primary.

Latest entries are from W.A. (Fred) Currey of Bay St. Louis, former state highway patrolman who now has his own detective service, and Orono P. Lander of Beat 2. Both have previously sought this office.

George Rayburn of Lumberton, a '37 graduate of the old Salliers High School, announced he's running for sheriff in Beat 2. Employed by T. L. James Construction Co. and Curran Private Patrol, Rayburn's wife is the former Sharon Lee, daughter of Mrs. Roger Lee of Lumberton and the late Mr. Lee.

On the same occasion, S.E. (St) Corley has announced for reelection as commissioner of agriculture.

In addition to the two announcing this week four others have qualified for the primary with the county Democratic executive committee. These are:

Attorney hedges on election line shift

Bond route eyed for port access road, rail

Port and Harbor commissioners looked at two main items last Thursday, the estimates for further construction work at Mulatto Bayou and the hiring of a port director.

Jack Williams of Michael Baker, Jr., Inc., their engineers, presented a copy of estimates for contract numbers three, four and five. Contract three, the next logical stage in the port development, calls for an expenditure of $347,100 and covers construction of the access road, levee paving, and railroad spur, 100 tracks. Contract four covers access road paving and, contract five, spur trackwork. The last two were for $65,600 and $495,900 respectively.

Attorney Gerald Gax warned commissioners not to approve any projects for which they lacked sufficient funds. Michael Hoss, their other legal counsel, agreed with Gax but pointed out that their present income is only gasoline tax and would not be sufficient to support a further bond issue without any difficulty.

Commissioner Donald Landry estimated the commission could issue at least $400,000 in bonds without overstepping their bond redemption income.

The engineers' estimates were taken under advisement and the port men hired Moore and Powell, accountants, to keep their financial records straight. Further they called for a complete audit of all accounts to enable them to reach an avenue through which they could finance their next port construction project.

Work is underway at the port with L.S. Stockstill, their clearing and grubbing contractor, on the job. Engineers reported that notice to proceed had been given and the contractor is moving equipment onto the site.

Surpassing the need for a port director, Dr. Arthur R. Martinolich, president, called for Landry, chairman of a port director selection committee, to report on his findings. Landry said several applications had been received and after studying each he and his committee decided to recommend the immediate hiring of George Attwood, an applicant interviewed by the commission last month.

Martinolich backed the Landry committee report and said that as the need was urgent he had conducted a further investigation of Attwood and called the applicant's qualifications. Attwood was cited as being an outstanding airport administrator, was presently available, would hire on at $15,000 per year and was willing to learn all aspects of port administration. He had been originally recommended by Arthur Miller, vice president of Michael Baker, Martinolich said.

Commissioners John Scaddis and Elliott Casanova objected to the nomination however claiming they wanted more than one applicant from which to choose. Scaddis asked if the National Assn. of Port and Harbor Directors had been approached as was the original intention. On hearing this had not been done he called for a resolution to the original proposal to see if any suitable personnel were available. This is now to be done.

Hoss reported no progress had been made to that time on

The board of supervisors' redistricting work came up again at Monday's meeting when Circuit Clerk Lamar Odo caught authority to conduct voter registration throughout the county before the July 8 cutoff date for eligibility to take part in this year's election.

Odo was finally told to make out a governing schedule and advertise it—after supervisors decided their redistricting plan they had to use for election of this year's election.

Some objection to the current redistricting formula was voiced by at least two voters from the Lakeshore precinct. Will Bordogon told the board he was of the opinion the lines had been decided and John Bordogon, a candidate for sheriff, said he would not accept any change had to be made.

The previous week the supervisors voted 4-1 to delete the 4-1-1 or at-large provision from the new beat line plan. But last fall the majority of the supervisors said they "could live with it."

John Scaddis, attorney for the board, explained that the basic question was still before the federal court and conceded that the lines were changed. He pointed out that last Monday's vote was only a advisory vote under the new law. He conceded it might be a violation of the provision and was accompanied by one representative "and we for sure on advisory."

H.G. Dean, Beat 1 supervisor, said he thought the Beat 5 members, R.G. Hubbard, Jr., should be present to determine to which precinct he wanted come of the Lakeshore beat moved. Those living north of U.S. 90 are not in the new Beat 1 area and conceivably could go into the Clermont Harbor or Arlington boxes of Beat 5.

The rest of Lakeshore goes into Beat 1, Dean added to the audience that the supervisors did not change the lines "for our eyes were more or less forced to." He referred to the federal court suit which calls for redistricting of Hancock County on the one-man, one-vote formula.

On the motion of Jack Lott of Beat 4, the election commission was directed to redistrict precinct boundaries carrying out the new beat lines. This carried 3-0 with Hubbard and Charles Lovinghouse of Beat 3 both being absent. Odo and Election Commissioners

County to get sewer, water study

A water and sewerage study for the county through federal funds was authorized by the three supervisors attending Monday's meeting.

Albert Switzer and Associates, consulting engineers with offices in Gulfport, offered their services and got the go-ahead for the survey with the verbal understanding they get no remuneration if it is not accepted as a federal project.

R.H. Schneider of the Switzer firm told the government seemed to be placing more emphasis on the work where counties were concerned rather than just one area. He explained he had talked earlier with H.G. Dean, Beat 1 supervisor, about a study limited to that district.

Wayne Allenton, county auditor, concurred in the advisability of seeking the study. He observed the health department now has "nothing to offer the people for a penny on the dollar." Sewerage difficulties, he said, already are showing up in Clermont Harbor and Port Lumberton while Lakeshore is approaching that area. Allenton attributed this to people voting the dirtiest vote acquired by Mississippi Test Facility and moving into small lots.

Four claims totaling $4,814.15 from the port and harbor commission were approved along with its recommendations for purchase of additional land in the Mulatto Bayou area for its initial industrial complex.

The port group was authorized to offer $10,000 to Jim Kelly for his 32.78 acres and $1,000 for the 2.07 acre needed from Mrs. A.F. Thion.

Port bills included $1,390 for call analysis at the airport site; $315 for a survey of new port land; both payable to Michael Baker, Jr., Inc., consulting engineers, and $1,831.50 for airport cleanup, both by Gulf States Laboratories under a contract awarded last fall.

The board accepted the relocation of State Street between Hancock Avenue and U.S. 90 as constructed by Coast Electric Power Agency, and ordered the hold Archaeology students at the University of Mississippi and Mississippi State University this summer will combine efforts in a joint "dig" at an Indian village site near West Point.

Class credit at both universities will be offered for the work, but students will spend all of their time at the village site rather than in classrooms.

"The program is designed to train students interested in archaeology in proper field techniques and to promote further interest in Mississippi's pre-history," Robert M. Thorne, curator of the Ole Miss Archaeological Museum and instructor in the department of sociology and anthropology, said.

ological techniques," Thorne said. "We'll have more information for them later this semester."

Students at Ole Miss will register and pay their tuition at the University in Oxford. A residence fee will be paid at the Mississippi State campus, where all project participants will be housed. Twenty-four students, 12 from each school, will participate.

The excavation will be at a village area with associated mounds located Southwest of West Point.

"Some of the objects we expect to find will probably date to late pre-historic and early time," Thorne said. "We certainly will find objects that were used before the white man came to America and most likely, some goods that were traded to the Indians in historic times."

The mound has been surface-collected by amateur archaeologists familiar with the site.

I have five people in my family and wanted the best car that I could buy—and that was Chevrolet. Secondly, I wanted to buy it at the cheapest price I could get. Thirdly, I wanted to be sure I could get service when and where I needed corrective repairs. I found all of these at the new Friendly GERRY LANE CHEVROLET. I changed around and saved money—besides getting the plus benefit of auto parts and service. I highly recommend my salesman HERB BARON to all of my friends.

Passing Of Passenger Trains

Take the kiddies for a ride on a passenger train this summer, folks; better do it now, because one of these days there may not be any.

If you are looking for a thrilling experience for your youngsters this summer, may we suggest something that would have been dull, routine business forty years ago and a bad dream of frustration and confusion during World War II.

Take a train ride with the kiddies, Mom and Dad. You may have ridden the rails many times (although we'll wager it was many years ago) but most of today's youngsters have never been on a train. They'll get a kick out of it. If possible, ride a train with dinner and make it a night ride on a Pullman sleeper. Once in their lives, your children ought to have these experiences.

Then, a generation later, they can regale their children with stories of the time they actually RODE on one of those iron horses. When the old movie shows the crook hiding out in a roomette, they'll be able to explain to their children how that was.

The way it's going, passenger trains as we know them are apt to be as dead as the dodo in another generation. While the parking situation at major air terminals gets stickier all the time, and landing space gets more congested while landing delays get longer, the railroads continue to walk away from passenger service.

The other day the N&W filed a proposal with the ICC to discontinue four trains currently serving this area. The line lost nearly $11,000,000 on passenger service in 1966, the line claims, and $1,000,000 of it was on these four trains.

The famous "Wabash Cannonball," mauld but popularized by Dizzy Dean's capella renditions on his baseball broadcasts, a favorite of Cousin Emory and her kinfolks on radio a generation ago, and given the gilt-edged treatment by Kay Starr, really was a live, honest-to-rootin' train. We say was, because it, too, is in the list of trains to be discontinued.

With the passing of passenger rail service, a colorful and romantic era in American life will die out. As things are now, possibly nobody will miss the passenger trains much. Some of the traffic-choked urban centers may wish they had preserved the commuter trains, but St. Louis seems to survive without them and even gets by without using buses enough to make them pay.

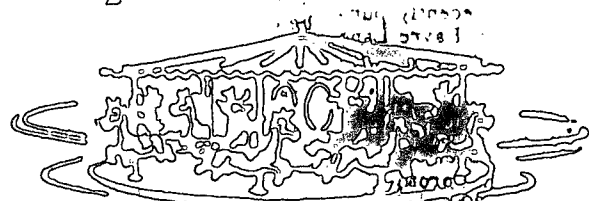

Only in case of another gasoline-rationing major war will the impact of the death of passenger service hit home. In World War II, what would we have done without the trains? We cussed them and battled the ticket lines and stood in the aisles, but we got there somehow, thanks to trains. Everybody who plans for the future of the country would love to keep the rail passenger service in being, so it can be used if an emergency occurs.

But nobody wants to use it enough to make it pay. And so, Mom and Dad, if you want to do your youngsters a favor, take them for a train ride.

While there is still a train to ride.

Merry-Go-Round

By Brown Pearson

WASHINGTON - It's the smallest, poorest country which has the most to gain from hemispheric cooperation but which is absent from the summit conference now in progress in Uruguay. They knew, of course, that the conference was preoccupied—like a dinner—with everything decided by the technicians in advance. They also knew that no important political questions would be discussed.

Bolivia, the poorest nation in South America, is absent because access to the sea is not specifically on the agenda, though it could have been discussed privately at Punta del Este. Haiti, the poorest country in the Caribbean, which needs economic help from the larger nations of the Western Hemisphere, is absent partly because President Francisco Duvalier is nursing a grudge against the USA, partly because he fears revolution will break loose if he leaves the country.

Haiti is the biggest political problem in the Western Hemisphere and could flare up into another Dominican Republic. It illustrates the weakness of the present Pan-American machinery for dealing with emergencies and points to one problem which the presidents at Punta del Este must remedy.

In Washington, the state department's "ready room" is constantly alert for any sign of Haitian revolution. In Haiti, President Duvalier, a graduate of the University of Michigan Medical School and at one time an expert on psychiatry, also isolated, bitter against the United States, ruling over a country which could become the Congo of the Caribbean. Duvalier's formerly robust figure has declined to toothpick size.

When he dies or is removed from office, a blood bath is almost certain between the wealthy mulattoes, who once ruled the country, and the poverty-stricken blacks. Meanwhile, the USS Boxer lies at anchor off the coast, ready to repeat in Haiti what caused so much bitterness against the United States when we landed troops in the Dominican Republic.

Advance precautions

To head off similar embarrassment, the state department last fall warned the Organization of the American States that trouble was brewing in Haiti. As a result, the former president of Ecuador, Gato Plaza, was drafted from his farm near Quito to go to Haiti for talks with Duvalier.

Plaza is an expert trouble-shooter. He acted on behalf of the United Nations in Lebanon when the Eisenhower administration landed troops in 1958; and also on the beleaguered island of Cyprus when the UN intervened to prevent war between Greece and Turkey in 1964.

In Haiti, Gato Plaza persuaded President Duvalier to accept a formula by which the United States would send road-building equipment to Haiti, and in return Haiti would permit the OAS to send troops—officially for the purpose of guarding the bulldozers, actually to prevent the expected blood bath between blacks and mulattoes.

"You have been accused of swiping road-building equipment in the past," Plaza half-joked to President Duvalier. "This will be protection for you."

Phlegmatic bureaucrat

Duvalier agreed, but the proposal was never carried out. It went to the OAS, where it ran up against phlegmatic Dr. Jose Mora, the charming, do-nothing secretary general. Dr. Mora had a few conferences with other ambassadors who apparently did not care whether a Haitian blood bath occurred or not. In the end, the carefully worked out plan of Gato Plaza was put on the shelf.

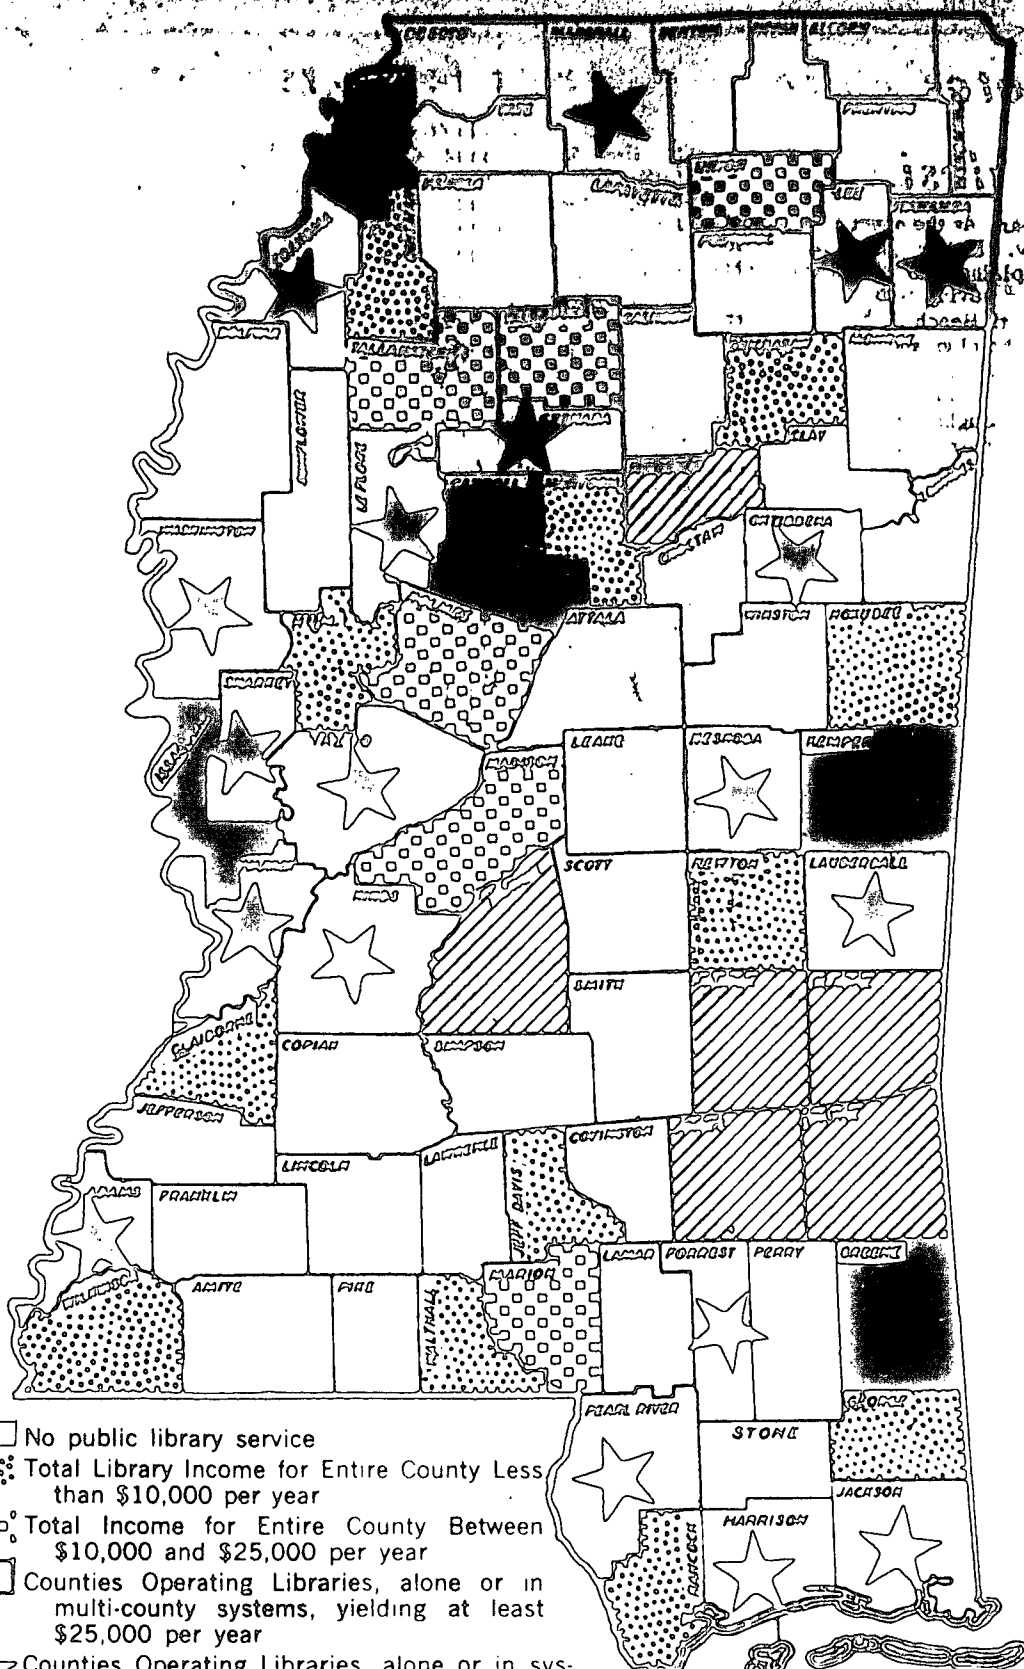

Haiti is the second oldest republic in the Western Hemisphere, having obtained its independence from France in 1804. But it has also seen some of the bloodiest wars in hemispheric history. Thousands of blacks have been murdered by fellow blacks in the past. Nothing but the ominous shadow of the USS Boxer at anchor off the coast can now prevent chaos after Duvalier's death—unless President Johnson this week can work out an advance commitment from his fellow presidents.

Ex-President Gato Plaza is now operating the biggest Holcadon dairy farm in the northern part of South America. He is milking 400 cows and shares ownership in a famous $26,000 North American bull, Graydon Clark Cowie, developed by the Curcio Cowie Company. They built a large in Illinois, but the cowie has been distributed by air to 2,000 cows in Puerto Rico, the Caribbean, and South America at a cost of $350 per lactation.

In Quito last month, Gato Plaza drove out to the Ecuador with Chief Justice Earl Warren to have his picture taken with the chief justice, one last in the Hemisphere. He was first in the Southern Hemisphere.

Gato is catapaulting into Quito to see a lecturer, who a few weeks ago was in New York where he was a lecturer and chairman of the West Coast of the United States chapter of the National University of Colombia, with additional duties in animal husbandry at the University of Maryland. He is on his way for trouble, having held the post of director of Ecuador for two years.

"A Conservative View"

by James A. Killip

Indiana's Senator Birch Bayh probably will not succeed in the one-man assault he is leading against the promotion of Rutherford M. Poole, but he may accomplish a useful purpose nonetheless: He may persuade his colleagues to contemplate, however briefly, the level of incompetence that infects the US foreign aid program.

Nowhere has this ineptitude been more grossly evident than in the administration of US aid to Vietnam. Elsewhere the record discloses slip-ups, mistakes, and bizarre decisions, coupled with some modest successes. In Vietnam, the record discloses little but bungling on the grand scale. For the past three years, the bungler-in-chief, directly responsible for the Vietnam program, has been Mr. Poole. Now it is proposed to reward his performance by promoting him within the Agency for International Development from assistant administrator for the Far East to deputy administrator for the agency as a whole.

In opposing this decision, Bayh is relying not only upon his own findings, in connection with AID's purchase of certain steel for Vietnam, but also upon the findings of a House committee and the General Accounting Office, and upon a number of investigative studies by private consultants and by AID's own people. Collectively, the evidence points glaringly to ineptitude up to top—which is to say, to the ineptitude of Mr. Poole. In the name of common sense, asks Senator Bayh, why promote him?

Last October's report from a House sub-committee, headed by John E. Moss of California, provided 130 pages of documentation on the multiple floppiness of US aid to Vietnam in 1964-65. Poole was directly in charge of the program throughout this period. Despite a highly critical study by the GAO in July of 1966, the Moss committee found in the spring of 1966 that AID had developed "whether the management tools nor the personnel to administer an effective commodity import program." Information essential to the development of sound and realistic recommendations "was for the most part nonexistent." No quantitative studies had been made to determine if the volume of particular imports was excessive. Other obviously essential information was equally inaccurate or nonexistent. There were no adequate records "on the arrival, pipeline, and inventory of commodities."

In sum, said the committee, "the manner in which the import program was being administered by the AID mission was contrary to sound management practices in government operations and was contributing to—rather than preventing—widespread abuses."

The Moss committee had a great deal more to say. The administrators of foreign aid to Vietnam had failed to cope effectively with profiteering, fraud, smuggling, theft, over-pricing and kickbacks. Evidence abounded that vast quantities of American imports were being diverted to the Vietnamese, but AID executives did nothing effective to halt this. Some of the abuses might have been prevented through AID's own management inspection staff, but the director of this staff had not even visited Vietnam for two years and exhibited neither the aggressiveness nor the knowledge to get the facts. Under AID rules, shipments not removed from Vietnamese warehouses within 90 days after arrival were treated as abandoned goods and sold at auction to distressed cargo. But the AID mission in Vietnam "maintained no records on the type, quantity, or dollar value of distressed cargo, did not attend auctions, did not maintain records on the proceeds, and had no control over the ultimate use of these proceeds."

All this was not for want of money or manpower. US aid to Vietnam in 1965-66 came to $728 million. The AID mission in Saigon was then employing 1,300 Americans, 1,900 Vietnamese and 300 others; its payroll was larger than the payroll of AID in Washington. In November of 1965, a management survey team, trying to determine what was wrong, found poor employee morale and a "lack of coordination between Washington and the mission." There were inadequate audits, inadequate security at warehouses, clogged pipelines and fantastic waste.

"No question about it," conceded Poole, who was managing the whole thing, "this program needed a great deal more management." This to the executive whom Lyndon Johnson has nominated to be deputy administrator of the entire $3 billion-a-year program of foreign aid. Senator Bayh finds the prospect incredible, and the senator is not alone.

On hospital

Our readers write

Editor, Sea Coast Echo:

I, Esther Morreale, former employee of Hancock General Hospital, went back to the board of trustees and Mr. Blockledge the administrator of the hospital, at the February meeting and called for a second time in all fairness to myself and family that let it be brought out to the public why I was fired.

It seems they don't want to say why, so I will. I was cured by Walter Blockledge, the one I went to Mr. Blockledge. He did nothing about it, my husband also went to talk to Mr. Blockledge. He told my husband he was the eighth to tenth husband that had already been up there about this man. And we spoke to the trustee about this. Mr. Blockledge made it to the office and said I would have to resign and I refused, so I was fired.

What is the board of trustees for if you can't talk to them in all fairness? Well, I can't talk to them. I wonder if they pay off, and another thing I was cleared by Mr. Blockledge. He told me my husband was a clear job. He didn't and I made it clear I didn't.

books galore but room to ponder

Shannon sports couple

Shannon is fed up with all the special days that are proclaimed. We just don't care about a week or baby diaper week. Of course there are some exceptions such as Veterans Day and the Fourth of July. Then, there is one that could be considered exceptional—a week is one of them. It's Library Week.

It is Library Week drew our attention to the City-County Library and its problems. Five counties with no libraries, and five will be determined later, the City-County Library, along with ten others, ranks at the bottom of Mississippi. (See accompanying map.)

With a budget of a little more than $7,000, our library has about $100 in new books each month and pays its three employees. Hancock County levies one quarter of a mill support for its library, Bay St. Louis levies one-half mill and contributes $25 a month. Hancock has approximately 20,000 books in the library and only 2000 square feet of space in which to store them. Because of this crowding, there are no seats or tables for someone to do research or just to read. There is not even space to store the books. With adequate housing the use of the library would undoubtedly increase substantially. Of itself would mean a better informed community. The trustees of the library, with Mrs. J. H. as spokesman, brought the matter to the attention of the board of supervisors. It is the hope that they can avail themselves of the money administered by the state to build an adequate library. This size was arrived at by dividing Hancock County's population 10 by 100. They also envision a bookmobile to travel through the county.

At this cost, estimated at $150,000 to $200,000, the county may be able to get 60 percent of the cost from the state administered federal funds for this purpose. For payment of the balance, the library has a $10,000 bond for this purpose and hopes for more. Also, the present quarters and the county is authorized to levy one mill for the library as compared to the present one-quarter mill. Rough estimates show that if federal funds are provided, a levy of one mill for five years, plus the library's current assets listed above, might be sufficient to build the proposed structure.

Most of us having just paid our income taxes, it is a bad time to advocate an increase in taxes, but sooner or later, and preferably sooner, a public library must get some new and enlarged quarters. It may be that the board will have to trim the 8,000 square foot structure they have to perhaps a 5,000 foot one which would be adequate for our immediate needs, but something must be done. An adequate library is a modern day necessity in a modern area.

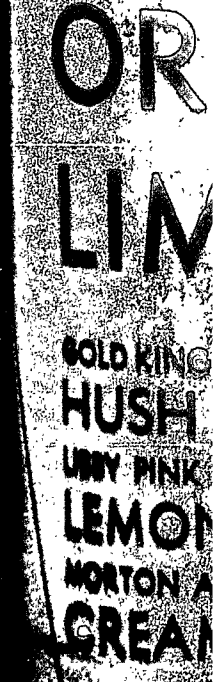

Schools needed

According to the Times Picayune, Hancock County representative, Walter James Phillips, said Monday that 30 percent of the state's school funds are dedicated to our public schools. Apparently, the 30 percent figure is not accurate because the liquor revenues are at least much more than anticipated by the 1966 census, which didn't specify any particular use for the funds.

At all bases Mississippi ranks last in expenditures in education. This is true for the teacher pay, average sum expended per pupil, and the grades Mississippi high school graduates on college entrance exams, etc. Yet, Mississippi improves this picture, it will also improve in per capita income and in state services. School revenues and academic achievement are honorably tied together.

Public education we believe Mississippi needs a crash program. Our only question is whether Representative Phillips' proposal to divert a percentage of liquor revenues we would have in our schools. We might be justified in allowing liquor revenues.

Hancock County is planning a mock election to elect voters and precinct workers with the purpose to be used in the August primary. The uncertainty as to how the supervising the August Democratic primary may affect the mock election for beat officials in Hancock County.

Man's death ends class picnic

Although there were no fatalities, the death of a 13-year-old boy, Billy Lamer, ended a class picnic at the Charles Cantrell estate at Leontine. Most of the students had notes from their parents authorizing them to go swimming. Swimming certificates were required from any student wishing to take a boat ride.

Wilkerson, caretaker for Cantrell for the last 15 years, was taking the last boat load of children out when the accident occurred about 1:30 p.m. Aboard were his niece, Mandy Wilkerson, 13, as well as the constable's daughter, Patricia. Another student, Ronald James, was watching the boat and seeing it overturn. Immediately ran back to the swimming pool, where most of the class was gathered, to inform the teachers, J.A. Harrell and R.C. Hubbard, III; Frank Moran, bus driver, and Mrs.

Garbage pick-up set for city annex zone

First on the list of services promised the 1,366 persons living in the four square mile area annexed by Bay St. Louis is slated to commence Tuesday with the first of a twice weekly garbage collection.

Mayor John A. Scalfie announced Wednesday that garbage pick-up in most of the annexed area will be on Tuesdays and Saturdays and that collection days in other areas would be changed to eliminate duplication of truck routes.

New routes are: Mondays and Fridays; that area on the beach side, or east of the Old Spanish Trail and Dunbar Avenue.

Tuesdays and Saturdays: the area west of, and including the Old Spanish Trail and west of Dunbar Avenue to the limits of the annexed area.

"We realize that in a new operation of this type there will be some problems that we cannot anticipate and we hope you will bear with us and give us whatever assistance you can in eliminating the problems as they arise," Mayor Scalfie said.

He urged that requirements of the ordinance dealing with proper garbage receptacles be closely observed. The ordinance specifies watertight containers made of galvanized metal or plastic with a tight fitting cover and up to 30 gallons in capacity. Plastic coated paper or fibre drums shall not be used for garbage or trash accumulations, the ordinance (Cont. on Page 5-A.)
